۱. psychologists conduct research in two common settings. If they answer questions by observing an individual's behaviors in his or her environment, without attempts to control or manipulate the situation, they would be using naturalistic observation. If psychologists study a single individual in considerable depth, they are using a case study.
۲. According to psychoanalytic theory, some emotionally painful memories and impulses are not available to consciousness because they have been repressed-that is, diverted to the unconscious. Unconscious thoughts and impulses influence our behavior even though they reach consciousness only in indirect ways through dreams, irrational behavior, and slips of tongue.
۳. Multiple personality disorder (MPD) is the existence of two or more personality in the same individual, each personality being sufficiently integrated to have a relatively stable life of its own and to be able to take full control over the person's behavior.
